Report It turned out to be a lovely day for this winter hike. While we did not see the sun, there was no wind to speak of. At least half of the hikers had never been on this Open Space trail. It's always a thrill to experience a new hike, and to take people to new places. We had great views of Cabezon, Bear Mouth, Mt. Taylor and the Jemez. There is not much in the way for flora and fauna this time of year, but some of the hikers were please to find some very interesting rocks in the area. We found a nice overlook for lunch, and enjoyed the views.

Thank you Don for driving and sweeping.

Thank you to Lora for providing some great pictures.
